

Campaigns, Corruption, and Cash

Thursdays 3:00 - 5:50 PM

What role does money play in electoral politics?

How are campaigns conducted in other countries around the world?

How are Transparency International and similar NGOs working to clean up elections worldwide?

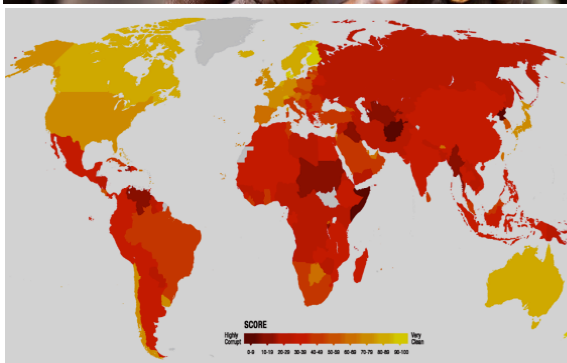

HNRS 2033: Campaigns, Corruption, and Cash in Global Perspective will tackle all of these questions as we study elections, representation, and the ways in which corruption and money in politics can undermine these.

Dr. Joshua Potter is an award-winning teacher who blends in-class activities with theoretical readings and real-world policy analysis. This method provides students with practical and academic knowledge topical issues in political science. The grading criteria includes writing, discussion, examination, and research.

Student reviews from Fall 2016:

“This was the best class I’ve ever taken at LSU.”

“Dr. Potter did a great job of teaching the material in a clear and interesting way ... I thoroughly enjoyed this class.”

“Dr. Potter is an excellent professor. I would definitely recommend taking his courses.”
